The novel of "John Inglesant" has gone into its twenty-fourth thousand. It has been the most remarkable literary success of the past few years in

Mr. Walter Besant has in press a volume of "Readings from Rabelais,"

Literature is pursued under difficulties in Russia. Several months ago a young man of some promise published a volume of poems, composed chiefly of selections gathered from other published sources, and immediately on the appearance of the book, which had already been permitted by the ordinary censors, the author was harried before the Minister of the Interior and threatened with imprisonment and exile. The books were all burnt, a search was suddenly made in his lodgings, and he was placed as a "suspect" under the supervision of the

Mr. W. D. Howells is quoted as saying that he always keeps his MS, six or seven months ahead of the time for publication. His nervous disposition makes it impossible for him to furnish matter at short notice. He is now at work upon a new story which will not be ready for publication before No vember of next year. To a reporter of The Baltimore American he said the other day, that he was inclined to consider "A Foregone Conclusion" the best thing he has ever written. "I think," he added, "it is a little mere artistic, and I am told that it enjoys a wider popularity in Europe than any other book of mine. I remember it well. It was one of my first novels. After I had completed it I rewrote the whole story before any part of it was given out for publication."

The biography of Madame Roland will be prepared by Miss Mathilde Blind for the "Eminent Women" series.

Mr. Charles Dudley Warner has written an article on "The Bull Fight" for the next Century. The necompanying illustrations by Robert Blum are taken from the life. In the same number will appear Alphonse Daudet's reminiscences of Turgeneff, with a portrait of the Russian novelist.

"Mr. Isanes," it is reported, is to be dramatized by Mrs. Burton Harrison.

The autobiographical sketch left by Bulwer and some of his unpublished writings will be incorporated with the Life of the novelist, which will soon be brought out by his son. This work, with Anthony Trollope's antobiography and Julian Haw-therne's Life of his father, will be the most important personal volumes of the literary year.

Portraits of Mr. Tennyson's wife and children will accompany the sketch of the poet which has been prepared by Anne Thackeray Ritchie for the December Harper. Mr. Tennyson has for once overcome his disinclination to be written about, and has himself recalled the days of his routh for the pleasure of his friend Thackeray's daughter and of her readers. Mrs. Ritchie's own recollections of the personages of that literary circle now so sadly broken promise to be full of interest. Beside the portraits and drawings of Tennyson's birthplace and homes the article will be illustrated with some unpublished sketches of Thackeray and D. G. Rossetti: Robert Browing lending for the purpose Rossetti's drawing of Tennyson reading " Mad."

The December Harper is in truth to be a rarely interesting and beautiful number-one which fitly belong to the Christmastide. Mr. Whittier will contribute what is really a Christmas poem "The Supper of St. Gregory." Gravely and tenderly it celebrates the Lord of the Feast:

"Unheard because our ears are dull; Unseen because our eyes are dull; He walks on earth, the Wonderful, And all good deeds are done to film."

Mr. Howells has written another little parlor comedy-about "The Register" this time, which is a contrivance exceedingly susceptible of humorous treatment-and this, too, will appear in this notable Harper. Charles Reade is another contributor, his short story bearing the title of "There's Many a Slip 'twixt the Cup and the Lip." Mr. Edward Everett Hale returns to Colonel Frederick Ingham and causes that troubled gentleman to find his famous "Double" at the North Pole, Mr. Abbey has delicately illustrated for the number in a series of twelve drawings Pope's poem of "The Quiet Life," Mr. George H. Boughton appears both as artist and writer in a story called "The Kissing Bridge "-a legend of Colonial Albany.

Mr. Boaghton knows the city of which he writes, for he lived there a long time and has relative there still. His career as a writer has been an u premeditated one. When he undertook with Mr. Abbey the journey in Holland which was to enrich the pages of Harper with quaint and original drawings it was first suggested that the artists should make notes for the use of a writer who should describe their trip; then that the two artists should themselves prepare the papers. At last Mr. Boughton determined to write them himself and was so successful and so happy in the work that he has added the pen to his permanent equipment.

Mr. Phil Robinson proposes to follow his book or "The Poets' Birds" with another on "The Poets Beasts." The last will probably be as uninteresting and unnecessary as the first.

Mr. J. A. Symonds's forthcoming work is en titled "Shakspere's Predecessors in the English Drama,"

Mark Twain's new book, forming a sequel to "Tom Sawyer," is announced in Eugland.

Mr. Ruskin's advice to a young reader is possibly worth quoting. "Pray continue," he says, in a letter written long 220, but just published, "to study Carlyle (you can get his life 2nd letters of Cromwell in Tauchnitz edition). Never mind what the common run of people say to you, but observe what people say who can do anything well (no matter what); their sayings are worth attention, though their way be wrong. Good soldiers, physicians lawyers, painters, musicians, men of literature, are always to be listend to reverently, even if you see they are prejudiced; but people of 'society,' and most commercial men, are always wrong in everything relating to general principles; still more, of course, the clergy. Read Piato, Xenophon and Horace continually, and Livy; you will find every wholesale human wisdom in them; for poetry read Dante, and our English Chaucer; the latter both for his exquisite character, and for the study of English at the root-a fountain-head rather-for the source is in Chaucer, higher and purer than the modern stream, very often." The last work accomplished by Turgeneff's pen before it dropped forever from his hand was a slight sketch called "The Quait." It is a remembrance of his childhood, tender, simple, and touch ing. It has been translated for THE TRIBUNE, and will appear with other agreeable matter in to-mor-

New Publications. CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS BIBLICAL STUDY.

Its Principles, Methods and History. Together with a Catalogue of Books of Reference. By harles A. Briggs, D.D., Professor of Hebrew and the Cognate Languages in Union Theological Seminary, New-York

Tyolessor Briggs has aimed to present a guide to Biblics Study for the intelligent layman as well as the theological student and minister of the Gospel, bellaving that a scientific study of the Word of God ahould be combined with a scientific see of it. It is all-important that the revival of Biblical tady, which is now in progress in theology is to be found a the working out of the principles of the Reformation and a the working out of the principles of the Reformation and a Puritanism, in carrying them on to higher and grander essilts. It is the constant aim on to higher and grander can be also been given; the stages of the scient of Biblical Study her been given; the stages of its deshopment are traced; the normal is discriminated from the inormal; and the whole is rooted in the methods of Christ at His Apostles.
